Hi John

I'm in agreement with Paola on this, I want to see a site plan showing exactly where the home will be situated in relation to boundaries and setbacks, as to what I will be looking at from my home. This is not a home that blends with our neighborhood, and I for one think the color, and the scope of this project is not in keeping with the designs and flavor of the neighborhood. It will become an eyesore to us, if these designs are moved forward. I can remember when I was building a shed on my property and the board made us match the siding of our house and the color and roof of our house to build a simple shed, this is no different. If I had proposed to build a white concrete box of a shed, the board would have denied my permit. What has changed in Tuxedo Park to allow this?
